CANDIDATE PHILOSOPHY

How I Think

Most operations hires are evaluated on which systems they've touched. I'd rather be evaluated on how I think, because the systems change every few years // the thinking is what transfers.

When I meet an established process, my instinct is archaeological — who built this, what were they solving for, // which assumptions have quietly expired. Most dysfunction isn't designed; it accumulates. I work at three focal lengths at once: the granular mechanics, the structural handoffs between departments, // what it costs a person to use a system that fights them. More than ten years in advocacy // public service, together with a working life at the piano, taught me the same skill — hearing which signal matters // which noise is just crowding it.

ARCHAEOLOGY BEFORE ARCHITECTURETHREE FOCAL LENGTHSFRICTION IS DATA
BUILT, NOT BORROWED

A Master of Social Work (MSW) systems practitioner // nonprofit operations leader with ten-plus years across advocacy, government, // housing. Contract pianist at The Jefferson Hotel since 2022.

"My background is broader than traditional advancement operations, // I have not yet administered Bloomerang. I do bring hands-on experience with EveryAction, Microsoft Office, reporting, process design, // cross-functional nonprofit operations." — From cover letter, August 7, 2026
